

Warranty cards

In order to be able to make a claim under a written warranty (<https://www.consumer.vic.gov.au/consumers-and-businesses/products-and-services/refunds-repairs-and-returns/warranties/types-of-warranties>), the manufacturer may require consumers to register the product by filling in and returning a warranty card.

However, a manufacturer cannot always deny a claim because the product was not registered.

If the consumer has a receipt showing what the item is and when they purchased it, this will usually fulfil the same purpose as registering the product.
